FLORIDA ORANGES. - In various parts of ment: Florids, south of latitude thirty degrees, especially along the St. John's and Indian rivers, there are immense groves of wild oranges. Bartram, in his "Travels." mentions having seen in 1763, near Mosquito inlet, a ridge about half a mile wide and forty miles long which was one dense orangegrove, interspersed with magnelias and a few other trees. So thoroughly established is the tree, and so generally is it distributed, that many have supposed it to be indigenous; but botavists who have investigated the matter regard it as an instance of remarkable naturalization, and the trees as having descended from those which are known to have been introduced by the early Spanish colonists. This wild orange to bitter, often called in Florida the bitter-sweet, and so exceedingly fruitful that a tree in full bearing is an object of great beaut; the wild orange furnishes stocks on which to bud other varieties, and the fruit is used to make marmalade. In Florida there are three methods of establishing an orange. grove: to clear up a wild grove, removing all trees not needed, and budding with sweet fruit those that remain; to take up young wild trees and set them in prepared ground, and there bud them; and to raise stock from seed, bud them in nursery rows, and when of sufficient size set them in the mlantation, as is practiced with other fruit. Each method has its advocates, but it is probable that the last named, though apparently slower, gives ultimately better results.-Appletons' American Cyclopadia (revised edition), article " Orange."

THE PUBLIC LIBRARIES OF EUROPE.-There are pinety-four public libraries in Europe, which contain more than 100,000 printed volumes each, and whose collections number in the aggregate more than 21,000,000 volumes. Many of them have in addition thousands of valuable manuscripts. Of these great storehouses of learning, the National Library, of Paris, is the largest, it containing 2,000,000 printed volumes and 150,000 manuscripts. The second position is disputed by the library of the British Museum and the Imperial Library, of S'. Petersburgh, per?" each of which claims to possess 1,100,000 volumes. The next position among the great collections of the world belongs to the Royal Library of Munich, with its 900,000 volumes. The Royal Library of Berlin has 700,000 volumes; the Imperial of Vienna, 600.000; the Royal of Copenhagen, 550,000; the Royal of Dres-den. 500,000; and the Royal of Stuttgart, 450,000. Next in importance are the great University Libraries of Cambridge and Go:tingen, each of which possesses 400,000 volumes. The University of Breslau has 350,-000; the Bodleian, of Oxford, 310,000; and the Advocates, of Edinburgh, the Grand-Ducal of Darmstadt, and the City of Strasburg, 300,000 each. The following contain 200,000 volumes or more: The Arsenal and St. Geneveve of Paris, the University of Bonn, the City of Hamburg, the University of Heidelberg, Jena, Königsberg, Leipsic, Munich, and Tübingen, respectively; the Ducal of Wolfentatel, the National of Pesto, the University of Bologna, the National of Florence, Naples, and Madrid, respectively; the Royal of Brussels, the University of Copenhagen, and the University lor. 5.
